JORDY

I went through the ranch's books, the records of the land this morning.

(HE moves her head to face a certain position.)

[redacted] JUANA

JORDY

Keep looking straight, past the oil rigs, follow my finger, look as far, as far as you can see, you'll see something that looks like a big dot. I did this with a compass and a map this morning. You see a big dot?

[redacted] JUANA

JORDY

That dot's a mesa, by that mesa was your family's ranch. That is Aurelia Dolores.

Hell I'm just making you cry.

JORDY

I was glad to be away from dad but I'm not much for big cities, I kept wanting to ride out on the land, this land. If I'd come here 200 years ago, I'd have fallen in love with this land too. It's not easy to love. Dad calls it heartbreak country.

[redacted] JUANA

JORDY

Hope some day I can.